Intercultural night

If you wish, please give any additional information, observations, comments or recommendations that may be useful for future projects. *

I think the project needed more preparation. Some days there wasn't any preparation of the energiser and participants had to take place and make them themselves. Also I feel like we should have starting preparing the final project earlier because in one day it was too much work to do and ending up being a really stressful process. Also the theme of the project wasn't prepared enough and we ended up falling in stereotypes, which is really dangerous once we come back to your lives after the experience.

It was a little bit hard to walk everyday from the hostel to the activity space, and walk to the restaurant, it would be better if it was in the same place, except this, i really liked this project (one of my best projects) it was so chill, the facilitators were soo kind and cool, it would be better if the Portugal team were more active and social like iris, and some of the lithuanien participant.

I would have enjoyed more activities related with the topic and theatre, more preparation of the activities and a better mediation with the participants. I also missed the original calendar, some activities weren't in the final one and nobody told us (the presents to the invisible friend, the white shirt..). The topics were treated in a very superficial way and I don't think I have learn something new about it, the way to approach the topic wasn't also with theatre.

I didn't need to have so much free time, I would have enjoyed to take advantage of the time we had with the rest doing more activities.

Lunch was great

I didn't learned anything about the topic of this proyect, we took the information we already had to make a video. It wasnt really organised and we didn't had any previous exercises to feel more conected and previous exersices to make the video, we started sudenly and it was abrupt so we couldnt agree because we haven't had a guide to do it well.

Better define the role of team leaders so they can perform more specific tasks that help the group and the facilitators. Pay more attention to the group's behavior while tasks are being performed to prevent anyone from taking control of the activities and imposing their ideas. Always ask if everyone is comfortable before doing an activity. Observe the group's needs. Don't just ask how they are, but pay attention to them and try to identify when someone might not feel comfortable doing an activity. Look for new energizers or assign each group to do one on a different day and decide on it as the first day.

I would recommend that the energising exercises are done by the organizers. Also we didn't do a lot of activities related to the project, we only worked for a few days and then the final project was like any other activity, we didn't have a lot of time. Another thing about the final project, many people didnt work as the others, some of them were only filming, the others thinking ideas and there was people that didnt do anything, so maybe be more strict with that or organise it in other way. With team leaders, i would say that they have to be the same age as the others if they are going to participate in the same activities than the others, because that is why there is a range of ages. And as a final comment, maybe the organizers have to be a little more strict for people to take them seriously so we could do all the activities and enjoy them without having to "force" people to do them.

I enjoyed the first day, we all connected to each other quite well and fast. Everyone was friendly and welcoming. I hope the next project will happen in these countries.

The cultural night was hard and long but worth it. I got to know everyone even more and because I love geography and history it was interesting and fun.

Also Porto was extremely beautiful. I didn't know what to expect from Porto or Portugal itself, so I was shocked a bit of how much I got to see and try!

If you wish, please give any additional information, observations, comments or recommendations that may be useful for future projects. *

Organise a little bit more activities. The activities were fun and meaningful but we had way more free time than time in activities. I liked that we could explore Porto or surrounding towns by ourselves. But always thinking what to do for the rest of the day (I'm talking about the days where we did all the activities in early morning) was a bit tiring.
